About

Michael Stevens Consulting is an HR advisory and leadership development firm that has been active in Nigeria since 1998. It has built its reputation around helping organisations strengthen the capabilities of senior leaders rather than simply filling vacancies.

Its main focus is leadership development. That means the firm works with executives, boards, and management teams on coaching, executive education, and performance improvement for people already inside organisations. For clients in sectors such as financial services, oil and gas, FMCG, and the public sector, that kind of support is valuable because leadership quality often shapes both strategy and execution.

A major part of the firm’s offering is board and leadership effectiveness work. This can include assessing how well boards function, identifying gaps in executive performance, and designing development programmes that help leaders operate more effectively in complex business environments. In that sense, Michael Stevens Consulting is less about hiring and more about improving institutional leadership capacity.

The firm has also built relationships with international business schools and global management institutions, which has helped connect Nigerian executives to broader leadership ideas and best practices. In its earlier years, that access was especially significant because many local organisations had limited exposure to structured executive development beyond what was available domestically.

Overall, Michael Stevens Consulting is best understood as a leadership capability firm. Its value lies in helping organisations develop stronger executives, more effective boards, and better management systems for long-term performance.
