About

StreSERT Integrated Limited is a Nigerian human resources and management consulting firm that sits in the middle market between large global consultancies and smaller HR agencies. Its work spans talent acquisition, organisational effectiveness, learning and development, performance improvement, and broader business support services for clients that want more tailored support than a generic recruitment provider can offer.

A defining feature of StreSERT's model is its emphasis on structured, high-quality hiring rather than volume recruitment. The firm supports clients with talent acquisition services that are designed for roles where fit, discretion, and judgment matter, especially at senior levels. That makes it different from contingency recruiters, whose focus is often on filling roles quickly and at lower complexity.

StreSERT also works beyond recruitment. Its consulting practice includes organisational design, performance management, strategy support, and implementation-oriented advisory work that helps clients improve how their people and processes function together. In practice, that means it can help businesses diagnose problems, redesign structures, and build HR systems that are better aligned with growth or transformation goals.

The firm appears to have particular strength in sectors such as financial services, FMCG, telecommunications, and related corporate environments where senior hiring and organisational discipline are especially important. Those relationships matter because confidential searches and senior-level placements typically depend on trust, sector familiarity, and access to passive candidates who are already performing well in other roles. That kind of access takes time to build and is one of the main advantages of an established consulting firm.
